RE: Validity of Euroclass certificates

Classification reports to EN 13501-1 for Marlon ST Longlife and Marlon CS Longlife are available on request from the Technical Services department at Brett Martin.

The length of validity of the certificates is dependent on the product tested and the way in which said product is tested.

If the product is a construction product submitted to a harmonised standard published in the EU's Official Journal and tested as described in this standard, then there is no length of validity until the product or the manufacturing process are modified.

A classification report obtained from an EU Notified Body states a "date of issue" which is a procedure based on EU regulations.

Yours sincerely,
